

Portfolio 2026

I tell the story of sport through photography: races, training camps, campaigns, athlete portraits. I love movement, adrenaline, the calm and silence that come before performance, the grit needed to reach your goal, whatever it may be. I feed on everything that can spark my creativity: art, music, books, film and design. I cultivate cross-pollination between people, disciplines and arts. In these pages, a selection of my most recent work, between studio and street, Italy and beyond. I shoot race and event coverage, campaigns and editorials (both on location and in studio), product photography, portraits and video.

1

PH Apparel

PH Apparel designs and manufactures technical cycling apparel in Italy. For the autumn/winter collection, I photographed the group among woods and bends, chasing the same understated elegance that defines every one of their pieces.

2

PHCC

When I was asked to shoot PHCC's new team jersey, I didn't hesitate for a second. The goal from the start was to highlight its qualities, working on the product's strengths and giving it the best possible context. The photos were shared on Cérvelo's official channels, the brand PHCC partners with.

Ristora

Ristora has been producing soluble drinks since 1966, a historic name in the industry that in recent years has chosen tennis as the setting to tell its products' story. Not competition itself, but the everyday gesture:

a sweetener, an energizing infusion, something fresh and light within reach between one training session and the next, in a young, informal setting.

3

Zullo

In Castelnuovo del Garda, since 1973, Zullo has been forging made-to-measure steel frames, one piece at a time, with the patience of a craft that industry has never managed to reshape. The challenge here was to capture that same handcrafted care in motion, along the roads of Lake Garda and the hills of Valpolicella.

PHCC Training Camp

PHCC is PH Apparel's club, and the training camp is its most authentic moment: whole days in the saddle, group life off the road, the glances shared by those going through the same effort together. The Training Camp isn't just about performance — it's also about a sense of belonging and building relationships.

2

Strade Bianche

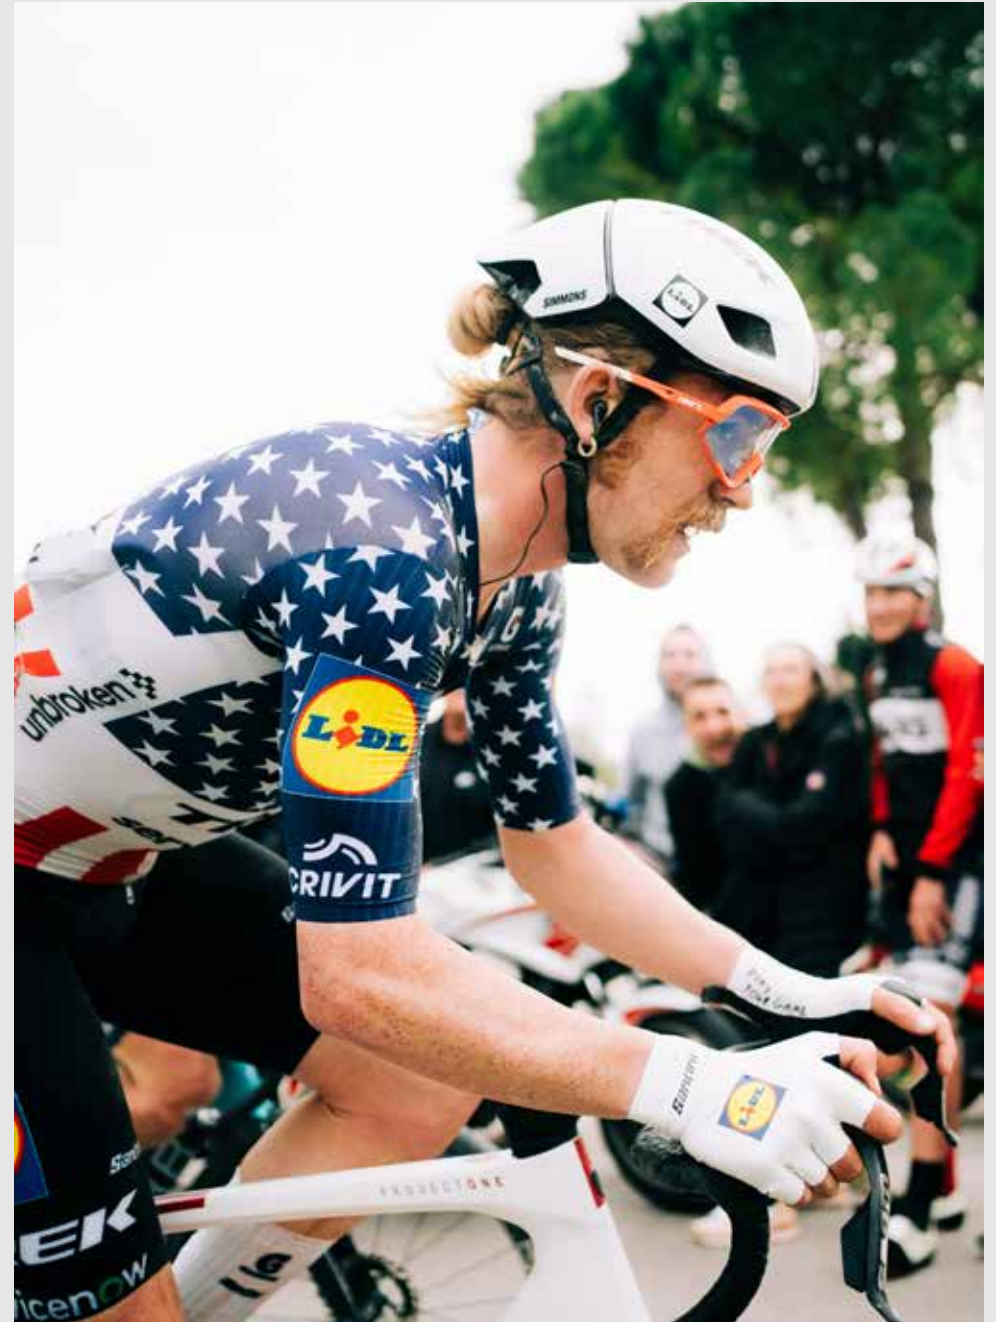

A full day of coverage at Strade Bianche, amid the dust of Tuscany and a crowd pressing along the roadside for a fleeting moment as the riders pass.

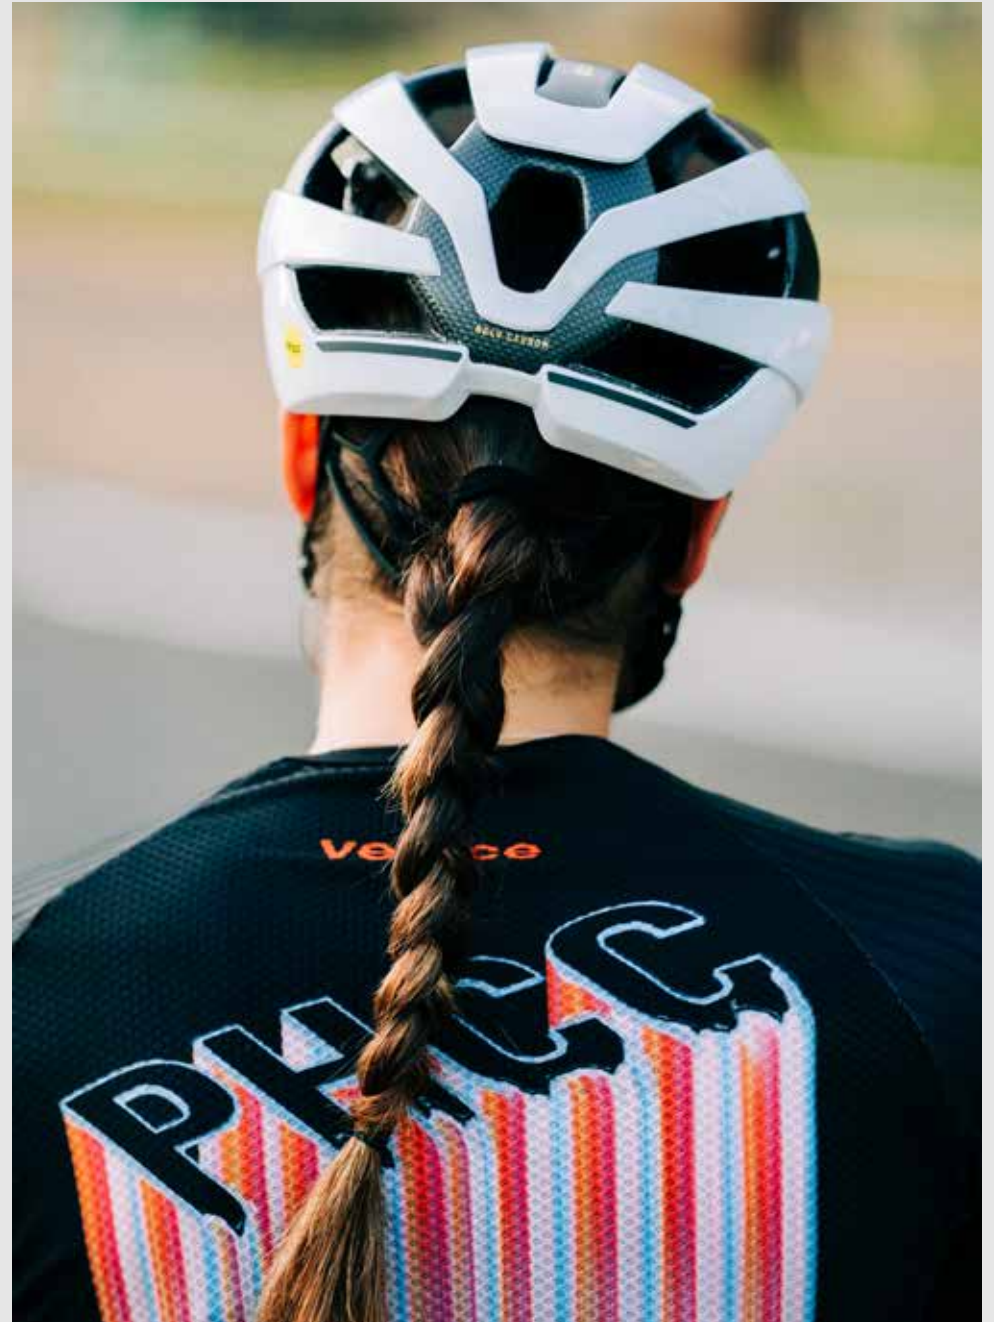

3

Verona Night Crit

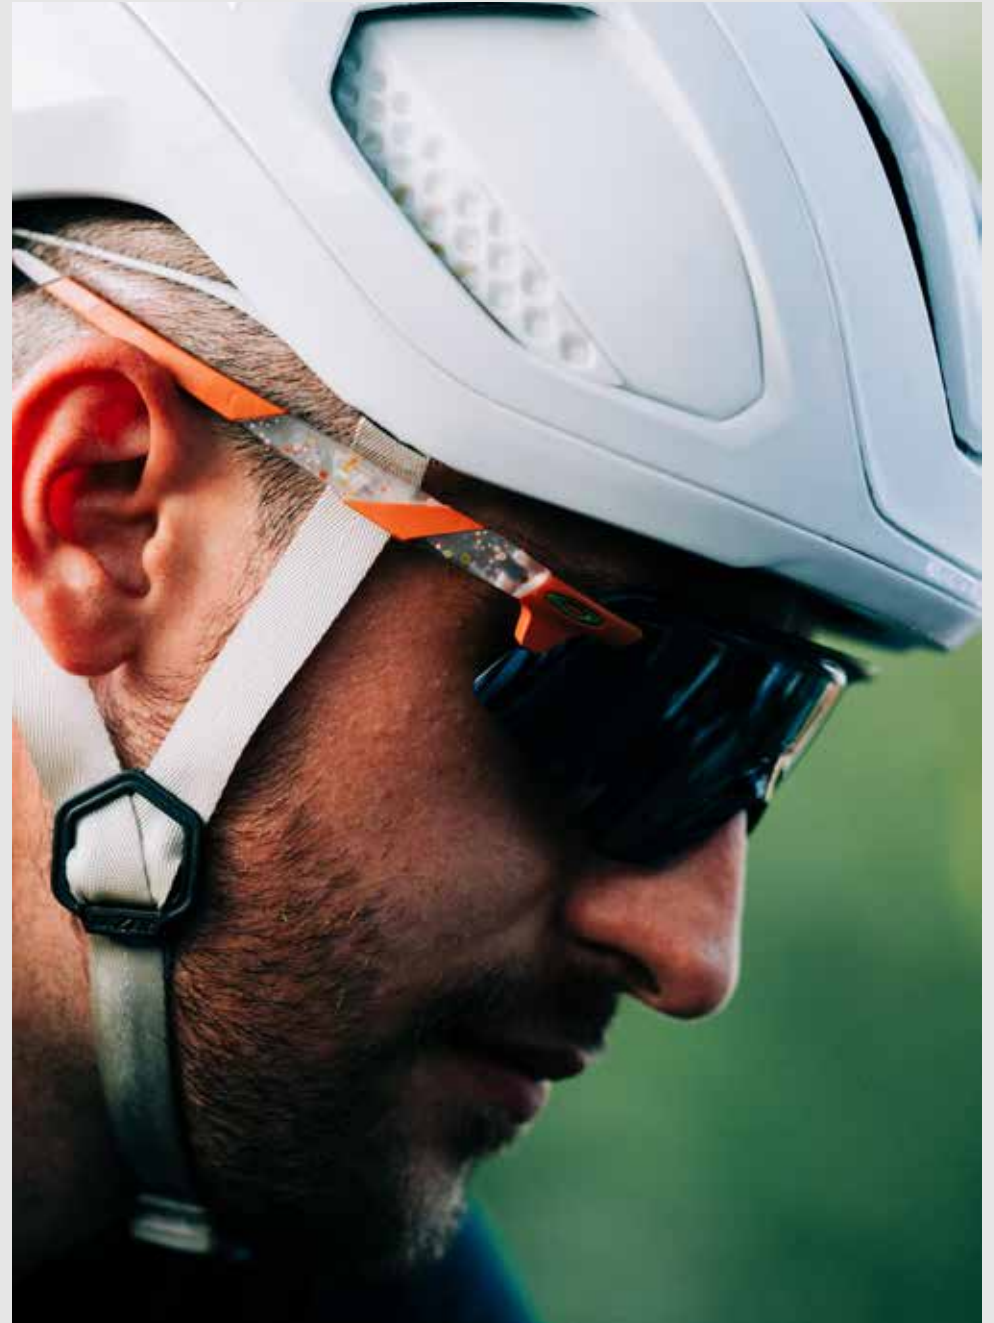

A criterium raced at night, in the heart of Verona. For the occasion I shot this coverage for PHCC, capturing the event's adrenaline at its best.
